Chapter 12 - Moves

Reading the moves

- 1) Name: The move's name.
- 2) Type: Which type the move is and what type of damage it deals;
- 3) Tier: Which tier the move is, and so, how much MP it cost and what tier your Pokémon needs to be to learn it;
- 4) Action: Which action you need to spend to use the move;
- 5) Cooldown: After being used, for that amount of rounds (not counting the round the move was used), you can't use it again. The cooldown is reduced even when you're outside of the battlefield. All moves start the battle off cooldown.
 - ◊ Some effects may raise or reduce a move's cooldown. Except said otherwise, those effects only change the next time you use the move or the current cooldown timer.
 - ◊ Some effects may let you use a move even while it's in cooldown. When you use a move this way, the cooldown count down doesn't change.
- 6) Damage: Which dice you should roll for damage. Some moves say "d1", in that case, doesn't roll any dice: you deal your relevant attack stat as damage. Status category moves don't roll to deal damage even if they have damage category.
- 7) Category: Which attack and defense attribute is relevant for the Accuracy Check and damage roll. Damaging moves are moves of the Physical or Special category;

➤ 8) Range: What Pokémon will be the target and within which range. A targeted Pokémon can always choose if they want to roll to avoid the attack or not (in the latter, being hit by default). The targeting categories are as follow:

- ◊ Other: Usually together of another targeting option, means that you cannot target yourself;
- ◊ Targets: You hit what Pokémon you want in the area;
- ◊ Everyone: You hit everyone, allied or opponent, in the area;
- ◊ Self: You can only target yourself;
- ◊ Melee: You need to be adjacent to the target to hit. Diagonals count as adjacent and you can choose to target yourself;
- ◊ Ranged Xm: You can hit any target within X meters of you. You can choose to target yourself.
- ◊ Area of Effect: The following targeting follow the Area of Effect ruling:
 - Line WxYm: You hit the targets in a line of W of length and Y of width, both in meters;
 - Cone Xm: You hit that targets in a cone of X meters, starting from you;
 - Blast Xm up to Ym: Choose a four way corner in the grid within Y range. You hit the targets up to X meters from the chosen point;
 - Burst Xm: You hit the targets up to X meters from you, counting from the edge of your space(s). You can't be targeted by your own Burst moves;
- ◊ Field: You apply an effect on the battlefield, rather than a target.
- ◊ Ally/All Allies: The effect targets an ally/all allies, no matter if you see them or not, neither the distance.
- ◊ Opponent/All Opponent: The effect targets an opponent/all opponents, no matter if you see them or not, neither the distance.

➤ 9) Effect: What effects the move does besides damage. By default, effects only apply if the user hits the target. Some moves have keywords, which can be seen in the next page.

➤ Tags: By itself, it means nothing, but the tag defines what coverage are able to learn it and what moves and traits interact with it;

➤ When “target’s are updated accordingly”, do the following:

- ◊ Pokémon that are now outside of an AoE move’s area are not targeted anymore;
- ◊ If pokémon switches places, the incoming pokémon is now targeted, while the former target isn’t;
- ◊ Pokémon now outside of a Melee or Ranged move range are not targeted anymore.

➤ Some effects may make a move fail. This means the move doesn’t deal damage nor activates any of its effects.

Reminder: User means the pokémon who used the move, while target means the pokémon who was targeted by the move. The user and the target may be the same pokémon, as it is obligatory for moves with Self range.

Keywords

Keywords describe some ruleset already established here.

Firstly, Golden Rule: By default, you can always choose which keyword or effect triggers first, except if the text says “Then [...]”, in this case, resolve the prior text before the later.

Secondly, when you have two or more instances of the same non-duration based numbered keywords in the same move, you can take the sum of both numbers as the final value. If you have two or more stances of the same duration based numbered keyword, only the higher number applies.

Examples:

- If a tier II pokémon spends its Quick action to use Steel Feet and then gave “Knockback 2” to Psy Kick, which already have Knockback 3, then resolve as Knockback 5 (3 + 2);

- If a pokémon under the effect of Heated Dance, which gives “20% Burn” to its moves, and then uses Fire Fang against a Poisoned pokémon, it can, firstly, choose between rolling for Flinch or Burn first, as only 2 Status Condition can be applied to a single pokémon at any given time, and secondly, roll to apply Burn with a final % chance equal to 35% (20% from Heated Dance and 15% from Fire Fang itself);

Keywords list

➤ Stat +X/-X: The move raises/lowers that Stat by X stages. Sometimes is together with a percentage, in that case, roll a d100 for every target. If the result is equal or below that percentage, you apply to that target the described stat stage change.

➤ X% Status Condition: The move has X% chance of applying that Status Condition. Roll a d100 for every target. If the result is equal or below X, you apply the before mentioned status condition to that target.

➤ Adaptable. If the user Attack is higher than its Special Attack, this move becomes a Physical move, if not, the move becomes a Special move.

➤ Boomerang. The user leaves a projectile in the nearest free space behind the target until the end of the next round or the user switches out. In the next round, the user can spend their Quick action to use this move again, targeting any opponent between them and the projectile. The user can use this Quick action even if the move is in cooldown.

➤ Buff/Debuff X. The following effect lasts for X amount of rounds or indefinitely if it isn’t followed by X. The effect is removed on switching out. A pokémon cannot receive the same move’s Buff/Debuff multiple times, instead, reset its duration. Sometimes this keyword is together with (T), in this case, countdown this keyword at the end of the target’s turn.

➤ Binding. The target becomes Binded for the next 3 rounds. While affected, the target loses 10% of their maximum Stamina at the end of every round and is also afflicted with the Locked keyword. If the move is Melee, the target also can’t go further than 5m away from the user. If the user switches out or is knocked out, the effect ends. A pokémon cannot suffer from multiple Binding effects at the same time.

➤ Charge (X): The first time the user uses this move, they spend X action instead, applying the following effects. On the next round, the user may now use the move as its original action, apply its effects, target pokémon and roll the Accuracy check. Then, the move enters on cooldown. At the end of the round, if the move wasn't used, the user becomes in Standard action Debt.

➤ Crash: If the move misses, fails or targets a pokémon immune to it, trigger the following effect.

➤ Critical Margin X. The move has a higher chance of being a critical hit. More information on Chapter Combat - Dealing Damage.

➤ Damage Category +X/-X. This targeted move has its damage category increased/reduced by X amount. Except said otherwise, this keyword targets the move itself.

➤ Dashing: The user can move up to their Movement Speed before checking for a target. However, sometimes the Dashing is together with a number, in this case, that is the amount of times you can break this keyword's movement with this move. This keyword may be paired with "(Out)" and "(Target)". In the former case, this move triggers this keyword only if used outside of their turn, in the latter, the target may trigger this keyword instead.

➤ Double/Triple. The move can be used twice (for Double)/thrice (for Triple) as the same action. As such, the user can choose 2 or more different targets, but they must roll to hit and deal damage that many times. However, the user can apply STAB only once per action, choosing after the move hits.

➤ X% Drain. The user heals their Stamina equal to X% of the Stamina lost by the target (rounded down). The Drain keyword is considered the opposite of the Recoil keyword, as such, if the same move has both of them, reduce the value of one by the value of the other

➤ Dual type: X. When calculating effectivity, the type of the move is the most effective between X and the move's typing. If you have STAB with either type, this move gains STAB. Additionally, for the user effects, the move counts as both types, while for the opponent's effects, only the type which the effectivity was used.

➤ Easy. This move doesn't take any move slots.

➤ Eject. This move's targets immediately switch out, except if their trainer doesn't have any other pokémon available. This keyword doesn't have an effect against wild pokémon.

➤ Field X: The following effect is applied to the battlefield for X amount of rounds.

➤ Growth: After each time this move hits and its respective resolution, this move gains the following effect until the end of the battle.

➤ Heal. Roll for damage using the target's HP stat. The target recovers an amount of Stamina equal to the result. If a Special or Physical gains this keyword outside of the Self keyword, it doesn't deal damage to the target. Apply STAB as usual.

➤ Innate. When this move is being learned or upgraded, it's considered as a Natural coverage even if it's learned via a Standard coverage.

➤ Knockback X. Move the target X meters away from the user, or as much as possible until it reaches a wall or another pokémon. If the keyword is together with "(Any)", the user can choose the direction that the target will move. If the pokémon would be moved further, but a wall or another pokémon stopped it, both the target and the other pokémon/wall loses twice the user's tier in Stamina for every meter it would've moved.

➤ Knocked: The target drops their Held Item in a random free space up to 3m away from them.

➤ Locked X. For the next X rounds, the target can't switch out at the round start or via any trainer action. Additionally, Wild pokémon can't run away from battle for the same duration. This keyword counts down at the round start, after the switch out step.

➤ Margin of Success X: This move gains/loses X amount of Margin of Success.

➤ Moving: The user can use this move in the middle of their Movement action to raise their Movement Speed by a value equal to half their tier (rounded up) until the end of that Movement action.

By default, after the user targets someone with this move, they have to end their movement. However, when the Moving keyword is paired with a number, that is the amount of times they can break the interrupted Movement action using this move.

Additionally, they can use the Rushing melee's targeting effect for this move without any prerequisites.

➤ Multi-hit. Roll a d4, then add 1 to the result. This result is the amount of pokémon the user can choose to target with this move. The same pokémon may be targeted more than once.

If this is a damaging move and you choose to target a pokémon more than once, raise the move's damage category by 1 for every time you choose that pokémon, besides the first. Roll damage for every target separately, however, the user can apply STAB to only 1 pokémon.

➤ Null:. Until the end of the round, any move from the mentioned description fails towards this move's targets. If used outside of the user's turn, the user becomes in action Debt of the same action required to use this move.

If this move has the Priority keyword, its cooldown isn't reduced even if used during the user's turn.

➤ Pass AxBm. The user can become in Movement action Debt to change this move's targeting to "Targets in Line AxBm". If they do so, the user moves to an adjacent free space at the end of the Line area. If there isn't one, then they can't use the move this way.

If this move has the Moving keyword, they may change the Line's area length to be equal to their Movement Speed, up to twice B in meters.

➤ Priority X: This move can be used as an Interrupt action, as long as it follows the Interrupt action conditions and it isn't used in the middle of another Priority move with a higher X value. In the case of a tie in X value, it can only be used if the user's initiative is higher than the initiative of the interrupt Priority move's user.

If this move is used during your turn, reduce its cooldown by a value equal to its tier. Additionally, Priority moves may be paired with a word in parenthesis, called label, in this case, the user can't use this move while any other move with Priority keyword and the same label is in cooldown.

Priority X is called positive priority, Priority -X is called negative priority but both are the Priority keywords.

➤ Priority -X: To use this move, the player must firstly declare their usage to the GM at the start of the round or right after their pokémon enters the battlefield. You cannot declare to use multiple negative Priority moves in the same round.

Then, the user can either use this move either during their turn, as its usual action cost, or at the end of the round, before the cooldown countdown step. In the latter case, the move is used as an Interrupt action, however, as long as the user has the action to use it, this move must be used if it were declared.

If multiple negative priority moves were declared in the same round and they are used at the end of the round, they must be resolved in order, from highest to lowest priority. In the case of a tie, the pokémon with the highest initiative uses their move first.

If this move is used during your turn, reduce its cooldown by a value equal to its tier. Otherwise, if you're not able to use this, you become in Interrupt action Debt.

Additionally, Priority moves may be paired with a word in parenthesis, called label. In this case, the user can't use this move while any other move with Priority keyword with the same label is in cooldown.

Priority X is called positive priority, Priority -X is called negative priority but both are the Priority keywords.

➤ X% Recoil. The user loses their Stamina equal to X% the Stamina lost by the target (rounded down). The Recoil keyword is considered the opposite of the Drain keyword, as such, if the same move has both of them, reduce the value of one by the value of the other ➤ Sacrifice. The user has its Stamina reduced to 0 after the move's effect.

➤ Sharpness X. To the target's roll to avoid and reduce damage from this move, they consider their relevant defense as if it were X amount lower. If this keyword isn't paired with X, consider X as the user's tier instead. This keyword counts as a numbered keyword, even when not paired with X.

This keyword cannot lower the target's relevant defenses more than half its base amount (before temporary effects).

➤ Scatter X. This keyword have the following format:

[Hidden] [Allied/Dangerous] Scatter X.
[Consume / Trigger] [Range] : [Effect]

- ◊ If it's Hidden Scatter, the opposing team can't see the Hazards, however, they can still try to sense or notice them by having a success in a Perception Skill Check DC 9 + the move's tier. In a success, they notice all opponent's hazards up to their Xm away from them, where X is equal to their Perception Skill modifier.
- ◊ Allied Scatter means that only their own allies can trigger the Hazard, while Dangerous Scatter means that both sides can trigger it.
- ◊ If it is Consume, then the hazard activates once and then it disappears. If not, it can activate an infinite amount of times, however, only once per turn, per hazard (not hazard type).
- ◊ X is the amount of hazards you will place inside the range.
- ◊ Sometimes, the X is followed by an area, like "Scatter 2 (Line)". This means that the hazard's size is equal to the move's targeting range.
- ◊ Range means how close you have to be of the Hazard to trigger or consume it. On contact means that the pokémon has to move into the same square as the hazard or move diagonally/switch into an adjacent space to trigger or consume it.
- ◊ Effect describes what happens when it's activated.
- ◊ By default, hazards can be triggered by any kind of movement (voluntary or not) or on switch in, but only once per turn per type of hazard. A pokémon which had a hazard scattered in the same space as them will only trigger it if they re-enter that space.

➤ Screen X. This keyword have the following format:

Screen X. [Trigger condition], [Effect]:
[Durability loss].

- ◊ After use, roll for damage using your tier x 3 as the amount of dice to roll. This will be the Screen's durability. This counts as a Shield keyword roll, but doesn't apply STAB.
- ◊ The Screen lasts for X amount of rounds on the user's side of the field. If there isn't X value, the screen lasts until the end of the battle.
- ◊ If the same Screen move is used while the same is already on the user's side of the field, keep the highest durability between the current screen and the new roll. Then, the screen resets its duration to X amount.
- ◊ Then, under the triggering conditions, the Screen can be used as a Free Action by any pokémon from that side of the field. Doing so, trigger its effect description, usually by reducing the damage received or impeding an effect from being activated.
- ◊ After triggering its effects, apply the durability loss. If after this step the durability becomes 0 or lower, the Screen is removed from your side of the field.

➤ Self. Apply the following effect on the user instead of the target. Trigger this effect for each target hit.

➤ Shield X. Roll for damage using the target's HP stat. The target gains the result as temporary Stamina. This Stamina can't go higher than the pokémon's maximum Stamina, but only lasts X amount of rounds. If a Special or Physical gains this keyword outside of the Self keyword, it doesn't deal damage to the target. Apply STAB as usual.

➤ Slow X. The target's Movement Speed is reduced by half (rounded down) for their next X turns. This effect is removed on switch out.

➤ Snare X. The target's Movement Speed is set to 0 for their next X turns. This effect is removed on switch out.

➤ Strange: [Stat]. When rolling to hit this move, you can use that stat as well. If this is a damaging move or has the Heal/Shield keyword, you have to roll its damage using that stat instead. This keyword may be paired with "(Target)", in this case, use the target's Stat instead.

➤ Summon Weather/Terrain: X. The battlefield is now in X weather/terrain effect. The weather/terrain lasts 5 rounds by default.

➤ Trigger:. Can be used as an Interrupt action under the listed condition.

➤ Unavoidable. The move bypasses the Accuracy Check, automatically hitting.

➤ Upgrade. Take this effect into account just if this move was Upgraded

Coverages list

The following section will list what are the exact moves available to every coverage, as well as their basic information (type and category).

Reminder: any Weather coverage has access to Weather (Any) tagged move and any Terrain coverage has access to Terrain (Any) tagged moves.
